

The FCC should not implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protections. This law has eliminated most unwanted calls to my home. If any action is to be taken the law should be made stronger to include all calls that are electronic in nature, or are unsolicited. It is my opinion that my denial of access to my home by unsolicited calls can not be considered an infringement upon the calls right to free speech.